A or B rated windows?

From the start of this year (if the specification has been correct) we have supplied you with B rated windows for no extra charge over your normal glazed prices.

Where the window frame complies we will continue to give you B rated frames. As a reminder the diagram below shows a section through our WER rated frame.

The points to notice are slim outer frame, bevelled sash and ogee bead. This must be the make up of any WER frame. It is the difference in sealed unit construction, with the addition of low iron glass forming the external pane, giving an A as opposed to B.

Should you require wide outer frame 15mm add on used round the slim outer will give you a rated frame with the same dimensions as a wide outer frame which is not rated.

Our WER frames are available in all standard foil finishes including a fully foiled A option.

You can ignore the effects of trickle vents, lead work, georgian fret (inside the unit) and an obscure outer pane.

To remind you our sealed units are soft coat E (better performance than K), warm edge (no cold bridging) and have an inert argon gas fill (to improve insulation) giving B with the addition of low iron glass (high clarity) you get more solar gain and an A rating.

Every one of our WER frames is individually marked and each job comes with a laminated A4 WER consumer label for your customer.
